Please forward to other programs and management as needed.

We have had some interesting and overall productive talks in Silverton this week and in the new Upper Cement Creek Work Group, a subgroup of ARSG that's to work on the technical aspects of looking at alternatives to Superfund and alternative ways to control the water. Kin Ross was at the table and appears willing to participate, although there were several reminders of what they have already done in the watershed. The county, and maybe some town board members, want to go visit some other communities with Superfund sites and then invite members of those communities to Silverton for a forum so that locals can hear about how those sites affected their communities. There is also a strong desire to come up with a creative solution that involves all stakeholders but does not require listing.

BLM also wants to get a meeting going quickly to talk about PRPs. I will be further summarizing conversations with locals and the County commissioners in a future email.

Sincerely,

Sabrina Forrest
